- ☐ the language of publication of the international application (under Rule 48.3(b)).
- ☐ the language of a translation furnished for the purposes of international preliminary examination (under Rule 55.2 and/or 55.3).

3. With regard to any nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence disclosed in the international application, the international preliminary examination was carried out on the basis of the sequence listing:

- ☐ contained in the international application in written form.
- ☐ filed together with the international application in computer readable form.

- ☒ furnished subsequently to this Authority in computer readable form.
- ☐ The statement that the subsequently furnished written sequence listing does not go beyond the disclosure in the international application as filed has been furnished.
- ☐ The statement that the information recorded in computer readable form is identical to the written sequence listing has been furnished.

5. ☐ This report has been established as if (some of) the amendments had not been made, since they have been considered to go beyond the disclosure as filed (Rule 70.2(c)):

(Any replacement sheet containing such amendments must be referred to under item 1 and annexed to this report.)

VIII. Certain observations on the international application

The following observations on the clarity of the claims, description, and drawings or on the question whether the claims are fully supported by the description, are made:
see separate sheet

INTERNATIONAL PRELIMINARY
EXAMINATION REPORT - SEPARATE SHEET

International application No. PCT/JP99/06881

Reference is made to the following documents:

D1: WO 97 04122 A (UNIV WASHINGTON ;LEE JAMES M (US); MAGNUSON NANCY S (US); AN GYNHE) 6 February 1997 (1997-02-06)

Item V

1. Claims 13 and 14 are not allowable under Article 33 (2) PCT.
Any glycoprotein known having a human type sugar chain, also those isolated from bacteria which are glycosylated by chemical means fall under the definition of said claims. Therefore said claims are not novel (see also item VIII).
2. The closest prior art document is represented by D1. Said document describes the expression of mammalian polypeptides in plant cells. In difference to the present application no human type sugar chains are produced by the insertion of an additional gene into the plant cell such as a glycosyltransferase.
The problem can thus be defined as the production of polypeptides in plants having a human or mammalian like sugar chain.
The problem is solved by the insertion of additional genes such as human glycosyltransferase and a foreign gene such as horseradish peroxidase (HRP) into tobacco cells (Example 4). Analysis of the sugar chains on HRP revealed that said chains consist of mammalian type and not of plant type sugar residues (Example 7). Therefore the problem has been solved.
There is no other relevant document cited in the Search Report.
Therefore Claims 1 - 12 appear to be novel and inventive.

Item VIII

1. The present claims 1-14 are not sufficiently disclosed over the whole area as defined by said claims.
In the description of the present application no true human or mammalian polypeptides are successfully glycosylated. The description only focuses on plant polypeptides such as horseradish peroxidase exhibiting a mammalian type sugar chain.
It is not disclosed that mammalian polypeptides with a mammalian glycosylation pattern can be isolated.

EXAMINATION REPORT - SEPARATE SHEET

Therefore the present claims are objected to under Article 5 PCT.

2. Claims 13 and 14 represent product by process claims. Said claims are only allowable if the products as such are novel and inventive and if the products cannot be defined by technical features (Art. 6 PCT).
3. Claim 8 is not defined by true technical features but more by a result to be achieved which is not allowable under Article 6 PCT. In order to render said claim more clear the features of Claims 9 and 10 should be included.
